I am an experienced Filmmaker & Cinematographer with a background working on an array of interesting projects over 4 years. My main work involves producing, directing, shooting & editing most of my own content for corporations, small businesses and on-line advertisements, some with worldwide exposure.

My biggest achievements so far have been producing promotional videos for Sheffield Hallam University working with a large budget in 2017. I impressed enough with these films to be commissioned again to follow up with the master's courses and make more films in 2018.

I also work closely with some friends at a production company called Brother Bear Ltd, where they hire me as a freelance Director and Camera Operator. Currently we are on our second year working with a company called Learning and Work where we travel the country making short form documentaries about adult learners and their stories.

My freelance career has had me working with various companies in South Yorkshire and the North of England. Working with such companies and institutions as The British Heart Foundation, British Cycling, Sheffield Hallam University, T-mobile, LG Phones and Samsung Cameras.

My passion is making films and I have a large portfolio of short films, some of which have gone onto win film festivals such as Leeds International in 2013. I have a drive to produce documentaries and recently I was commissioned by the University of Sheffield to produce a short film about Yellow Arch Studios in Sheffield and why it is important for the city.

I am currently exploring funded documentary and adventure projects to expand my portfolio and push myself further on my career path.
